I am not a gambler. But I plan to travel to a few different casino's this summer. My plan is to work 12 hour days, sleeping in and maybe stopping for a meal along the way. I plan to use the following plan: Day 1 - Work 12 hours at an average wage Day 2 - Relax Day 3 - Work 12 hours at an average wage Day 4 - Relax Day 5 - Work 12 hours at an average wage Day 6 - Relax ...and so on My question: How can I make sure that the previous day's worker has not already taken $1 away from the casino? I could imagine the worker coming back and asking "Is my wage too low?". My response is to return "Yes. The minimum wage is $10 per hour. Your wage should be at least $12 per hour. If you are not happy with my wage, I can talk with my manager". It is not even necessary for me to return to my wage, if I have a friend or a family member who will help. How can I make sure that the previous day's worker has not already taken $1 away from the casino? A: You can: Make sure you have a friend/relative who can watch the casino while you are at work. Limit the amount of money that is paid to you to something that would be considered a hardship if you took it. Be sure that the casino is notified in some way that you are aware of the problem. No matter what you do, you can't prevent someone from stealing money. You can do everything in your power to make it as difficult as possible to steal the money. However, you can't guarantee that no one will steal. People steal when they want and can get away with it. I would recommend that, if you are going to take a lot of money out of the casino, that you use as large a sum of money as possible. Depending on your situation, that might be $1,000 or even $100,000. c6a93da74d
