My car is leaking water from a cracked windshield and some other water leaks. Before I decided to fix it, I called the service dept and they told me that some of the water leaks may be caused by a crack in the door. They are not sure if the leaks are from the door and not the windshield as it's out of order. They said that it may be damaged and I have to fix it. Is it possible to seal the crack to stop the water leaks? Is there any paint that can be applied to repair it and seal it? I have an era 2005 Ford Focus. A: It is totally possible. This type of crack is very deep, and you need to apply some sealant in order for the water to seal the crack. Usually the only thing needed is the right product. I would do it myself. The reason why you should do it yourself is that a day without sealing the crack might cause additional cracks. You need to do it from inside the car. You need access to the crack as well as your hands. The easiest way would be to use a can of sprayable sealant (I think it's called "spray polyurethane foam" but you need to check the label). The second best way is to use a "liquid sealant" like the one described in this article (PDF) 6d1f23a050
