It's time to face facts Nov 27, 2012 The Girl Scouts of America just released a new national marketing strategy, "Girls Who Grow Smart, Grow Strong". According to their press release, part of their goal is to ensure that "little girls become strong, confident and influential women." While the Girl Scouts are deeply dedicated to this goal, it is high time we had a frank discussion about how this goal is actually implemented in our public schools. I've been very involved in the Girl Scout movement since I was old enough to join my first troop. My daughter joined Girl Scouts at about the same age as well. For us, as well as many other parents of girls, it has been a wonderful experience. From home-canned goods, homemade party favors to cookie sales, we have been able to raise hundreds of thousands of dollars for the organization. We have also learned important life lessons which I believe that all parents should take to heart 6d1f23a050
