The Moms meet the Cuban grandma Our visit to Cuba in December 2004 was unusual in so many ways and so many aspects that we experienced there was just incredible. The first day of our trip was December 2, 2004 - a Monday. I had packed my new dress and a new pair of heels and my swimsuit, all of which I was so excited about. It was a dress that I had purchased at a party store in Toronto. It was red with white trim and had a ruffle neckline and red lace at the top. I also had purchased a new pair of shoes that I had only worn once. On the top of my head I put an older-looking hair do that I had been wearing for a year or so. I tried to curl my hair under but it didn't work. I decided I would just let it do its own thing and let it dry in the Miami sun. We all got up that first day at 5 am and spent the hour and a half in the car getting to the airport. The flight was late, but not significantly. We were taken into a small room where we were seated at one of the tables in a very small area. Each table had a calendar that was on the wall. I remember this was December 2004 and we were in Orlando, Florida. I was sitting at a table with a nice couple from Chicago. We watched the movie "Safety Not Guaranteed" and talked about living there. My husband said there was a surplus of Canadian tourists there and we felt like we were a part of something special. He told me that we were "grinning like idiots". That was the first thing we ever said to one another. His comment still sticks with me to this
