If I had an array of unsigned char and needed to set it to between 0 and 255. I couldn't hardcode 0-255, I needed a something like: const unsigned char min = 255, max = 0; This looks rather ugly. Is there a better way of doing this? Maybe with typedefs, but I'm not sure how to do that? (Note: This is using C++, not C) A: A possible approach is to use a template function for generating an array, e.g.: template const unsigned char values[] = { 0 c6a93da74d
