this problem. I'm getting good result at running show fulltext for this query. A: The WHERE should evaluate to a Boolean expression like you are using. In your case, its a string constant as the value of the WHERE clause. The WHERE is trying to evaluate to a boolean value that is not what you expected it to be. Change your WHERE clause to WHERE YEAR(Coverage_Date) = YEAR(CURDATE()). To turn this into a "operational" query, change the complete portion of the statement above the FROM to:
SELECT Stageline_Type FROM Stageline INNER JOIN Stageline_Details ON Stageline_Details.Stageline_ID = Stageline.Stageline_ID INNER JOIN Stageline_Type_Details ON Stageline_Type_Details.Stageline_Type_ID = Stageline_Details.Stageline_Type_ID INNER JOIN Covers ON Covers.COVER_ID = Stageline_Details.COVER_ID INNER JOIN Stageline_Name ON Stageline_Name.Stageline_ID = Stageline.Stageline_ID WHERE YEAR(Coverage_Date) = YEAR(CURDATE()) AND Company = 'TRW' AND Coverage_Type_ID = '1' This should yield the same results but is more typical of how I would write the query. Medicine is on the brink of a paradigm shift as thousands of scientists and physicians come together in Stanford for the Icahn School of Medicine First Day Celebration on August 17. In addition to a full day of official events, for the first time ever the School will give its students and faculty a voice by holding a two-day unconference so they can meet with each other to explore what they're excited about in medicine, share their ideas and raise their profile. Our world-renowned faculty are tackling some of today

Our powerful and accurate engine scanned each and every part of the PDF manual and book before it was translated into English. Another difference between the present and previous studies is the sample recruitment. Although the previous studies recruited samples from a referral center, here, we recruited samples from the general population to investigate the association between depression and obesity. The prevalence of obesity in the Taiwan population is increasing and reaches over 28% at the age of 20 years. Therefore, the result in the present study may not be representative of the general population. However, we observed strong associations between depression and obesity by using a general population-based database. In the present study, we attempted to minimize potential confounders by adjusting for a variety of factors and including only non-smokers. Furthermore, to ensure the accuracy of our data, our control group was chosen from a self-reporting questionnaire database in which the response rate was above 80%. Information regarding the smoking rate for each gender and each age was also obtained from the same database. In addition, BMI was used as a measure of adiposity instead of waist circumference and waist-to-hip ratio. In conclusion, the prevalence of depression was higher in obese subjects with a BMI of ≥ 30 than in those with a BMI of 25--29. Furthermore, BMI was inversely associated with depression in male and female subjects after adjustments for confounding factors. Our results suggest that a higher BMI is associated with a lower frequency of depression in the Taiwanese population, regardless of gender. However, further studies with larger sample sizes and longer follow-up periods are needed to examine the relationship between obesity and depression.
